TWIN BROTHERS HAVE PROVIDENTIAL ESCAPE

Penn State Students Victims in Midnight Accident.

WILL LIKELY RECOVER

Addison M. Rothrock, Jr., and his twin brother, Henry A., both Penn State students in the Junior class, had a miraculous escape from a tragic death in an accident that occurred near Centre Hall station about midnight on Sunday night. One of the young men was seriously hurt about the head and it was feared he had sustained a fractured skull. He was brought to the Bellefonte hospital in the ambulance. He was visited there the early part of the week by his parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. M. Rothrock, of West Chester, who left orders that no information be given out so that we were unable to get reports about the young man from the hospital. It was learned from other sources, however, that while his condition is serious, he will likely recover. His brother escaped with a few bruises.

The young men are quite well known in State College and vicinity. They were returning to the college town after they had made a trip on their motor cycle and had just crossed the Pennsy tracks nearby the Centre Hall station when two autos approached from the opposite direction. At the same time a special excursion train was nearing the railroad crossing and the driver of the first auto stopped. The second car seemed to be too close to be controlled and it was swerved quickly to the left in passing the first car. Being directly in the path of the motorcycle, the two students had no opportunity to prevent a collision and both were thrown to the ground with considerable force. The motorcycle was damaged considerably.

Some Good Losers.

Ira G. Burket, of Stormstown, and Edward Gehret, of Bellefonte, who were unsuccessful candidates for Republican nomination for County Treasurer at last week's primary election, gracefully concede defeat and declare that the nominee, J. O. Heverly, will have their hearty support at the November election.

"I made a hard fight and did the best I could, but was defeated," said Mr. Burket. "I shall do everything I canto help elect Heverly. Four years from now I shall make another dash for the nomination."

"I was defeated, but I am for Heverly," smilingly remarked Mr. Gehret, "I appreciate all that my friends did for me."

Fiddell's Salty Sentence.

Ed Fiddell, of Cambria County, the one prisoner of the trio who assaulted Sheriff Harry Dukeman in a desperate attempt to break jail here and who refused to plead guilty, preferring to remain in a cell at the death house at Rockview, was sentenced in court on Tuesday afternoon. He may now be obliged to serve until 1944. Brought in at 1 o'clock, he was given a chance to speak for himself as soon as court convened, but had very little to say excepting he desired to knock on the institution which the Judge soon stopped. Fiddell was given not less than 14 nor more than 21 years. He was taken to Pittsburgh this morning by Sheriff Dukeman.

Young Woman Hurt by Auto.

Miss Sarah Hoy, driving a cow along the main road near her home at Lemont, was slightly injured by a Ford car into which she ran when confused by the approach of several cars from different directions on Sunday afternoon. She fell over from nervous exhaustion, after running into the car, and there was considerable traffic congestion for some time, as many motorists were on the highway and it was feared the young woman had been seriously injured. Such was not the case; after gaining her composure she walked to her home.

Baptist Conference at Milesburg.

The annual session of the Centre Association of the Baptist church is in session in Milesburg this week and more than 100 representative of churches in the district, including Blanchard, Milesburg and Philipsburg in Centre County and taking in churches westward to Johnstown, are attending. The program started with two sessions yesterday. Today there are three sessions and Friday the conference will close.

Takes Over Garman Hotel.

Jacob Knisely, of Bellefonte, has resigned as a deputy warden at Rockview prison and on Oct. 1 will take charge of the Garman House, which for some time past has been conducted by Henry Kline.

At this court he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, costs of prosecution and six months in the county jail.

Patrick Donohue, charged with driving an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. Prosecutor Robert R. Mingle. This case is from State College and the defendant pleaded guilty. Sentence was suspended upon payment of the costs and the automobile placed in custody of the prosecutor, who is the chief of police of State College borough.

John Sharp, charged with driving an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. Prosecutor Willis Geissinger. Sentence in this case was suspended excepting that the defendant is to pay the costs and a fine of $500, to be realized out of the sale of his automobile.

On Tuesday morning Paul Burnyak, David Polinkas and Thomas Polinkas, indicted for attempted rape; Prosecutor George Fye. This case is from Burnside Township, and the charge is that Hazel Fry and Bertha Hahn while returning from school at the German Settlement, came up to the defendants and that they tried to take advantage of them. The defendants denied the charge strenuously. The Court directed the jury to find a verdict of not guilty.

The Grand Jury acted on twenty Bills of Indictment, of which twenty were True Bills and reported that they had visited and inspected the county buildings and they would recommend a door to be cut through the wall in the southeast corner of the first floor of the jail leading from what is known as the dungeon, and jail yard, as a means of egress into said yard in case of fire; and recommend a porch or portico to be built on the door leading from the west part of the jail and approaching the cement walk leading to the Court House, as a means of protection to the building since rains coming from the west allow water to run under the floor into the main dwelling, thus injuring the building; and also recommended a new door over the entrance into the cellar of the jail on the north side of the building, as the present door is practically rotted away.

A. C. Leathers, J. T. Leathers and Walter R. Mason, indicted for conspiracy. Prosecutor, C. C. McKinney. This case grows out of the filing with the

Zerby Backs Taylor to Make Himself Judge of Centre County

Two important matters are involved in the campaign in Centre County which is now under way and which will terminate at the election on November 6th. Each has a vital bearing on the future of the Republican party in the county. Primarily there is involved the laying of the lines for next year's battle to elect a President to succeed President Coolidge. With the hope of being able to carry Centre County for President next year, Democrats in the county are making an active fight to capture control of the county this year. They reason, and quite properly so, that if they can win the county in the present campaign such a victory will inspire greater effort to place Centre County in the Democratic column at the Presidential election in 1924.

In taking this stand the Democrats have boldly challenged the Republicans of the county to a test of strength on Nov. 6th. Needless to say, the Republican men and women of Centre County accept the challenge.

The Democratic plan of campaign this year has been mapped out with considerable cunning. One phase of the plan is to lead as many young men into casting their votes for the Democratic ticket in the present campaign and thereby have them classified as Democrats for next year's Presidential election. This is one of the underlying motives in the Democratic scheme to have as many young Republican soldiers as possible vote for Taylor for Sheriff. They are being asked to sign petitions indorsing Taylor because he has been a soldier. No mention is made to them that the move is purely political, that it is aimed to strengthen the Democratic party, and that they are being marked up as Democrats for the future. Neither is mention made to them that Captain William H. Brown, the Republican nominee for Sheriff, was in the military service for many years, and because of that fact is deserving of consideration at the hands of every soldier. Captain Brown was not over-seas, but that wasn't his fault. He tried his best to get into the service with the opening of the World War, but was rejected because of the age limit. No fair-minded Democrat can deny that fact, because the records are open to public inspection.

To make William D. Zerby the next Judge of Centre County is the second card up the sleeve of the Zerby-Kurtz-Taylor combine. Zerby is the chief director of the Taylor campaign. If Taylor is elected, Zerby expects to be the political beneficiary of the Sheriff's office. The Sheriff to be elected on Nov. 6th will be in possession of the full power of his office when a successor to Judge Quigley is named. If Taylor is made Sheriff, there is where Zerby expects his scheme to make himself the next Judge will be promoted and developed, and if possible pushed through to success.

If the people of Centre County, whether Republicans or Democrats, want Zerby as their next Judge, the surest way in the world for them to bring that about is by voting on Nov. 6th for Taylor for Sheriff.

These Men Were Defeated by the Zerby Kurtz-Taylor Combine

Elmer Breon, marked for defeat so Taylor could be nominated for Sheriff.

William Carson, first enchered out of being a candidate against Taylor, and then marked for defeat for County Treasurer because the latter nomination had been promised to Lyman Smith.

John Yearick, scheduled for the humiliation of defeat so that John Spearly and James Swabb, the slated candidates, would be nominated.

Wagner Geiss, whose candidacy for Recorder was laughed at by the Zerby-Kurtz-Taylor combine, but who came within 21 votes of defeating the combine candidate, Sinie Hoy.

HOY AND GEISS SEE-SAW

Former Finally Declared Democratic Nominee for Recorder.

Sinie Hoy and Wagner Geiss, rivals for the Democratic nomination for Recorder of Deeds, played sew-saw for several days while the official return board counted the vote cast at last week's primary election. Unofficially Hoy was declared the nominee by 61 majority. Then the official count gave the plum to Geiss by 6 majority. Three times the board recounted the vote to make sure there was no mistake. Meanwhile Geiss was accepting congratulations, and Hoy was said to be threatening a contest. The Zerby-Kurtz-Taylor combine which was behind Hoy was badly rattled because of the apparent break in the combine slate. Finally it was discovered that one return sheet from Ferguson Township had been read twice for two precincts instead of two separate sheets for those districts. The shift was not much, but sufficient to change the nomination back from Geiss to Hoy. As a consequence there was great rejoicing in the Zerby-Kurtz-Taylor camp, for Geiss had been marked by the combine for defeat from the very beginning.

The count revealed that the total Republican vote cast at the primaries was just about twice as great as that polled by the Democrats. This is regarded as another sign pointing to Republican victory in November. Despite all the pressure exerted by the Zerby-Kurtz-Taylor combine to bolster up the Taylor candidacy for Sheriff, the total vote cast for him and his one opponent, Elmer Breon, was only 2364, as compared with 4016, the total Republican vote for Brown and Knisely. The official count of the vote follows:

Injured in Fall.

Mrs. Samuel Fetters, of Bellefonte, was very severely bruised on the forehead, above her right eye, and suffered minor injuries on her face, when she fell and struck her head on the edge of a concrete step on Monday evening. She had accompanied her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Clair Keeler, on a motor trip to State College and return. Her dress caused her to trip as she stepped from the auto to go into her home on Logan street and she fell with considerable force. Her injuries, while painful, are fortunately not serious.

BELLEFONTE LEADS THE WORLD IN THRIFT

Dominant Idea Urged in School Banking Project.

THEMES IN ADDRESSES

Bellefonte leads the world in thrift, according to the themes brought out in several interesting addresses given before the meeting of bankers and teachers at the Brocherhoff House on Saturday at noon. The Bellefonte Trust Company was host to the teachers in this banking district and about fifty covers was spread at the luncheon, nicely served by M. A. Landay, proprietor. After the meal had been enjoyed by those present, N. E. Robb, treasurer of the Bellefonte Trust Company, presided, making a few preliminary remarks.

In his remarks, Mr. Robb said: "The banking system I have explained to you has been in vogue in the Bellefonte schools and Walker Township school for some years. We have now 700 depositors and the deposits amount to about $11,000. That is an average of $15 per pupil. It is the largest average in the United States and I think that is something to be proud of." The method explained by Mr. Robb was that of giving the teachers the materials—a pupils bank book in which he or she made deposits as low as 1 cent and on the same basis as in a bank, Wednesday being recognized as the banking day; a bag (in which the total of the money received is placed to be turned into the bank) and a teacher's report sheet, for record and comparison.

David O. Etters, county superintendent of schools, was called upon to speak and unreservedly urged the teachers to instruct the pupils in thrift and that the banking system had his hearty approval. Mr. Etters emphasized the local lead by a query, "Did I understand you, Mr. Robb, to state that we lead Pennsylvania or the United States in school banking?" The reply was prompt, "The United States." Then, in his own style, Mr. Etters said "Well, you might just as well say we lead the world in thrift. All the other nations look to the United States for money."

Prof. A. H. Sloop, supervising principal of the Bellefonte schools, was next called upon and spoke very highly of the success of the school banking system, adding touches of humor to his thought but urging that the system be continued and that teachers in nearby townships also establish the system in their schools. "I would urge that the slogan be, 'Every pupil a banker.' We would rather have 30 pupils giving 2 cents each than ten pupils giving 15 cents each. The idea is to teach thrift. It works better up to the sixth grade. Tried out in the High School it was not so successful but we have close to $10,000 in deposits from the grades. The part I am proud of, however, is that we have something like 600 pupils banking."

H. C. Rothrock, assistant superintendent of schools, was called upon and spoke briefly, showing that teachers have much more now from which to save and should set the examples for the pupils.

Col. J. L. Spangler, president of the Bellefonte Trust Company, in a few well chosen remarks, referred to the tendency to waste and frankly asked the teachers to uphold the lead made by Bellefonte by working to bring in more depositors in the school banking project.

Mr. Robb, in closing, explained that no invitations had been sent beyond this banking territory because it was not the intention to go into the districts served by the State College, Port Matilda, Howard and Penn's valley banks. He asked all teachers to go to the Bellefonte Trust Company, after the meeting adjourned, to be reimbursed for any expense they went to and secure materials for establishing banking in their respective schools.

Family's Narrow Escape.

Betty, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Gordon, of Bellefonte, was painfully cut on her right hand Sunday afternoon, while her parents and two brothers escaped injury when the Ford touring car in which they were riding upset after it had been sideswiped by a Maxwell touring car, driven by a young lady from Lock Haven. The Bellefonte party were driving to Lock Haven, their son, Clarence, at the wheel. They had negotiated the abrupt curve near Clintondale when the Maxwell car is said to have shot around from the other direction. The Ford was overturned and the family pinned underneath. It required six stitches to close the wound in the little girl's hand. The Ford was badly damaged.

TEACHERS INSTITUTE WILL BE DIFFERENT

Section Meetings in Morning; General Sessions in Afternoon.

POTATO SHOW FEATURE

Some big changes will be tried out at the annual Centre County Teachers' Institute to be held in the Court House in Bellefonte this year from October 22nd, to 26th, inclusive. David O. Etters, county superintendent, will be in charge; assisted by Harry C. Rothrock, assistant county superintendent, and John B. Payne, vocational superintendent.

As usual, this promises to be a big week in Bellefonte. About 330 teachers are employed in Centre County and business men here are planning for special merchandising events while hotel men and a number of home mistresses are arranging for entertainment of those who come in from other parts of the county. Of course, this is not so big a problem as some years ago, many teachers now driving to and from town in automobiles.

The instructors on the program include Dr. L. H. Besler, of Chicago, Ill., who was here last year and made a good impression; Dr. J. F. Marsh, assistant state superintendent of instruction in W. Va.; Dr. J. Freeman Guy, of Pittsburgh public schools, here for part of Institute last year; Miss Zoe Thralls, of the Indiana Normal School, a specialist in Geography; Dr. Lee L. Driver, in charge of rural education, and J. A. Foberg, specialist in mathematics, both from the state department of instruction, at Harrisburg. Mrs. M. R. Krader, supervisor of music in the Bellefonte schools, will again be in charge of Institute music.

There will be no night programs. Superintendent Etters did away with this part of Institute several years ago, giving the teachers the evenings for their personal use and avoiding considerable expense. The abandonment of the custom seems to have met with favor and will be continued.

The annual meeting of the School Directors Association of Centre County will be held in the High School on Wednesday morning, the 24th. Officers will be elected and usual business transacted.

A feature on Wednesday will be the Potato Show at the Armory under direction of Mr. Payne. About 100 boys and girls sponsored by business men from Bellefonte, State College, Port Matilda and Millheim, have been testing potato growing methods, seed, etc., on quarter acre plots this summer. The results of this project will be brought out at the show and at a demonstration to be given before the teachers in general session on Wednesday afternoon.

The Potato Show will open at 1 o'clock and continue through the afternoon and evening. The public, especially those interested in potato growing or development by our boys and girls, is requested to visit the Armory, see the exhibition of nice spuds, for which suitable prizes will be given the exhibitors.

In the evening there will be a banquet at the Armory given by the business men to the boys and girls and their fathers. Each business man who has sponsored a boy or girl will accompany them, with the father, at the banquet. Centre County has 715,520 acres or 1,200 square miles of land, one-third of which is devoted to agricultural pursuits. The business men, co-operating with the vocational supervisor, assisted the boys and girls in scattered parts of the agricultural districts and it is planned to get the selected choice potato seed in the hands of farmers and growers in all parts of the county to the end that the potato yield may be increased and improved.

...ough a Sieve Woven Finer Than Silk

Raw materials of which portland cement is made come out of the ground usually as solid rock.

They must first be crushed, ground and reground until at least 85 per cent of the resulting powder will shake through a sieve that will actually hold water.

This sieve is considerably finer than the finest silk fabric. It has 200 hair-like bronze wires to the inch. That means 40,000 holes to the square inch.

But the several crushings and grindings necessary to reduce solid rock to this extreme fineness are only the beginning of cement making.

The powdered materials must then be subjected to intense heat for several hours in huge rotary kilns. Here they are half melted and become a substance much harder than the original rock—clinker, it is called.

Then the clinker must be crushed and ground until at least 78 per cent of the resulting product will pass through the sieve woven finer than silk. This is portland cement.

More than 80 power and fuel consuming operations are necessary in cement making. The electric power alone used in producing a barrel of portland cement would, if purchased at usual household rates, cost $1.70.

Few manufactured products go through so involved or complicated a process as portland cement. And it sells for less per pound than any comparable manufactured product.

According to his father, young Lew is the unluckiest fellow alive.

"Consider the last case," declaimed the old man. "Lew goes to the city and falls in love with a girl that lives out in one of the suburbs. And then she throws him down."

"But ain't the point. The point is that the girl threw him down on his second trip to her place, and he'd went to work and bought a fifty-ride commutation ticket."—American Legion Weekly.

THE GRAY LADY

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

PAUL DARROW smiled as he shrugged into his raincoat and picked up a soft cloth hat. From the window of his small bachelor apartment he saw the Gray Lady next door braving the spring shower, bending over her flower beds, clad in a woolly gray coat and a flopping gray felt hat that hid a probably gray head.

"She is certainly a dear old thing," thought Paul, a bit tenderly perhaps. "She will catch her death in this rain—rheumatism will cripple her busy little feet—what is she trying to do?" He was passing the place now and the Gray Lady, with her back to him, was struggling with some tender seedlings beaten down by the heavy drops.

"Help!" shrieked his Gray Lady. "Hiram—Dan—" Her voice was drowned in a rush and splashing of water. Paul was not waiting for the tardy henchmen, Hiram and Dan, to appear. He turned back and ran up the garden walk, to pick up a half-drowned little woman. A bursted copper leader pipe from the roof was pouring out a small cataract of water, drowning the young plants.

"Please take me into the house," said his burden faintly, and when Paul reached a side entrance there was an excited stirring of several servants. A strong-armed maid received the dripping mistress and bore her out of sight, and a very pompous butler eyed him suspiciously.

"Better send some one to mend that leak," remarked the dazed hero, as he went out to pick up his umbrella and brief case.

"Haw!" ejaculated the butler, as he closed the door gently.

Later, at his office, Paul found his papers wet and damaged to some extent, but with the aid of his secretary, they were recopied, and so at night he was able to carry them home once more for perusal. It had stopped raining and the sun was drawing out the fragrance from every growing thing, even from the earth itself.

He wondered if the Gray Lady had recovered from her fright and would be working among the flowers. He pondered the propriety of calling there and inquiring about her health. This matter was decided for him.

When he reached the hedge the pompous butler panted down the path toward him.

"Ow, sir!" puffed the man.

"Are you calling me?" asked Paul.

"Yes, sir; if you please, sir, Miss Little wished to know if you would be so kind as to step inside a moment. It's about the matter of the water pipe, sir," he explained loftily.

"Very well," said Paul briefly, and followed the man around to the front entrance of the low, widespreading house. In a few moments he was bowing before a pretty, slender, dark-eyed girl, who sat near a tea table. She arose and held out a little bronzed hand.

"I hope you don't mind my sending Harking after you, Mr.——"

"Darrow," he supplied, taking the sun-kissed hand. "I hope your mother, or perhaps it is your aunt, has not suffered any ill effects from the shower this morning."

"My—mother? My aunt? Ah, no, indeed, Mr. Darrow; they are quite well; in fact, they are both enjoying a week or two at Lakewood. I wanted to thank you for your kind help this morning. My poor little seedlings were quite drowned, poor things." She had turned to the table and was pouring him a cup of tea.

"I have been interested in your garden ever since I have lived in Mrs. Vivian's house," remarked Paul, as he drank tea and ate the delicious cakes she offered, "or is it your grandmother's garden, Miss Little?"

She opened wide her eyes. He was thrilled to notice they were big and brown and long-lashed. "My grandmother?" she repeated breathlessly. "It used to be my grandmother's garden—I call it mine now."

"I am afraid I have quite fallen in love with the little old lady who trips about among the flowers," he laughed shyly as he put his empty cup on the table. "I have seen her in all weathers, and I have built up some pretty romances about her. While the snow was still on the ground she was brushing it away and peering for the first crocus!"

"Little old lady—what little old lady?" she asked, for her mother and aunt were tall, stately women.

"The little lady in gray—I call her the Gray Lady." Paul was embarrassed now.

Suddenly Miss Little laughed delightfully; she dimpled and blushed to the roots of her soft dark hair. "Why, Mr. Darrow, how amusing! There is no little old lady excepting myself!"

"You?"

"You have been deceived by the old gray things I wear around. Mother and auntie are quite scandalized by my appearance, but they are dear old rags. It was my life you saved from the flood this morning, and your visions of rheumatism—"

"Help!" choked Paul feebly.

"Have another cup of tea and then you may come out and see my garden," she smiled graciously.

They did walk in the garden, Paul and his Gray Lady, but it was almost a whole year before he could really call her his own.

The AMERICAN LEGION

HEADS LEGION AD. MEN'S POST

Maj. Reed G. Landis, chairman of the American Legion's national committee on aeronautics is a man qualified to speak and act on this subject, according to his war record. Major Landis has nearly a dozen enemy airplanes to his credit, and was in some stirring engagements.

Of course great deeds are to be expected of the son of such a virile American figure as Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, but the young man has won a record "of his own."

Major Landis was a member of the old First Illinois cavalry when the troops massed on the Southern border in 1916. Though discharged from service there, he was recalled in 1917, and was sent to the first officers' training camp, only to be transferred to the air service, becoming a student of the ground school. He took flying instructions at the University of Illinois flying field, was sent to England and assigned to the Fortieth squadron, British expeditionary forces, then flying the "single seaters." He accounted officially for ten Hun planes before he was relieved from the British service to take command of the Twenty-fifth squadron of the American forces. After commanding this organization for a short time, he was ordered home and was attached to General Woods' headquarters staff at Chicago as departmental air service officer.

Maj. Reed G. Landis.

For his ability with aircraft, Major Landis was awarded the highly coveted British Flying Cross, a decoration much sought by all English aviators. As a writer, he has contributed to a number of periodicals, with special articles on the air service.

Major Landis has been commander of the Advertising Men's post of the American Legion in Chicago, and has been called on to speak before many Legionnaires throughout the country in addition to his duties as chairman of the national aeronautics committee.

MAY REOPEN BONUS CASE

Result of Minnesota Supreme Court Decision Likely to Affect "Non-Residence" Ruling.

Claims of from 10,000 to 15,000 veterans who registered and were inducted into the service from Minnesota, disallowed by the bonus board on a "nonresidence" ruling, may be reopened as a result of the recent decision of the state Supreme court in the case of Everett Baum.

In its ruling the Supreme court held that a person temporarily residing in Minnesota at the time of the call for registration who registered and who thereafter left the state but returned to be inducted by the draft board into the service, is entitled to the state bonus.

Baum, who was born in Pennsylvania, came to Minneapolis in May, 1917, obtained work and registered for the draft in June. The following January he went to Oregon and Washington, but returned in July at the call of the draft board. He entered the service and a year later was honorably discharged.

The bonus board disallowed his claim on the grounds that he was not a bona fide resident of Minnesota. The Supreme court ruled that he was a resident because "the place of residence is the place of work."

It is pointed out by American Legion members that if this is the case, the 10,000 or 15,000 similar applications involving nearly $3,000,000 from others, who constituted the state's floating population on registration day, June 5, 1917, and who were subsequently inducted, may also be affected by this decision.

CARE OF VETERANS' CHILDREN

Full co-operation of the children's bureau of the United States Department of Labor will be extended to the American Legion in the plan for care of dependent children of World war veterans. This assistance to the program of the Legion on a problem which Legion leaders believe will eventually approximate care of disabled, will be rendered in every possible way, according to Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the children's bureau, in charge of welfare work for the government.

Miss Abbott has clearly outlined to George A. Withers, chairman of the Legion's national committee on children's homes, her ideas of what the veterans' organization should undertake in this work. In the first place, Miss Abbott says that every effort should be bent toward keeping the children of the Legion whose fathers have died, or are incapacitated, with their mothers or near relatives who are willing and competent to care for them. Miss Abbott declares that in the past it has been a common practice to take away children from the remaining parent if means are insufficient to care for the dependents. Usually, according to child welfare workers, this operates adversely, causing a double loss to the child. Sometimes a mother is allowed to struggle on under a load obviously too great for her shoulders, and the family becomes demoralized—sometimes delinquent. Here, thinks Miss Abbott, is where the Legion posts may help in this portion of the problem by friendly help and care, and by lending assistance in the schooling.

Miss Abbott says that foster homes are generally regarded as better than institutional, if children must be taken from their parents or relatives.

"Such an institution," declared Miss Abbott to Chairman Withers, "should be the last resort after every effort has been made to keep the family together, rather than the beginning of a program. If you could get every post to report to the state department, and in turn to report to national headquarters as to the success in caring and providing for these children, helping families to remain together, in finding ways of providing scholarships for the education of the children, etc., then finally as to the institutional care which may be necessary, I think you would make sure that the Legion children were having the right kind of opportunity for home life, for special care, if physically defective in any way, and for education, which is their right."

The government welfare worker holds that members of the Legion who are to handle this vital problem for its members should be named from the ablest men in the organization, and that they should approach the question as one which is certain to require diligent study, great expenditure of time, and much patience and ingenuity.

LONG FIGHT WON BY LEGION

Federal Judge Killits Holds Foreign-Born Objectors Not Entitled to Citizenship.

Foreign-born men who had conscientious objections against serving in the United States military and were exempted have been denied citizenship by Federal Judge John M. Killits of Toledo, Ohio. This matter has been the subject of a long and bitter fight by members of the American Legion throughout the country, and officials of the Veterans' organization were well pleased with the action denying to such men the rights of citizenship.

Judge Killits, in his opinion, declared that the court was unable to see how any applicant, who, on the grounds of conscience, objected to bearing arms in his country's defense, can take the oath of citizenship without reservations and that he, as the court, was unwilling to accept any such oath with reservations to it.

"Without any intention to reflect upon the quality of the profession of conscientious objectors," declared Judge Killits, "we feel that it is enough that the country must endure the native born of that persuasion whose citizenship is a birthright without extending the number by the favor of the naturalization laws."

Many posts of the Legion have fought against granting of citizenship rights to such applicants since the close of the war, and, in a number of cases, the fight has been successful. The Toledo instance, however, is believed to be the first decision of a federal court in the matter.

Ohio Is in Lead.

Ohio leads all other states in the number of local voitures of La Societe des 40 Hommes et 8 Chevaux, the "playground of the Legion," though only one-half of the state is organized. The department now has 45 voitures, with Iowa second with 37, Illinois third with 36, Pennsylvania fourth with 31, and New York fifth with 28. The largest voiture of La Societe is in Los Angeles county, California, where the local membership is 316. Polk county, Iowa (Des Moines), is second with 214; Linn county, Iowa (Cedar Rapids), third with 205, and Cook county, Illinois (Chicago), with 204 is fourth. These are the only voitures which number a membership of over 200. Membership in La Societe is based on activities in the organization of the American Legion, and is selective.

FOUNTAIN PENS ARE FAVORED

The instrument of all royal writers of England prior to the Victorian age was the quill pen, though in her later years Queen Victoria abandoned her prejudice against novelties so far as to use the steel pen.

At the present time monarchs, like their subjects, avail themselves of the improvements which human ingenuity has wrought in the pen, and King George, the queen mother, the prince of Wales and Princess Mary are firm devotees of the fountain pen. The pen with a reservoir is equally popular with the rulers of Italy, Belgium, Spain and Rumania.

Those who are fortunate enough to possess autographs of these exalted personages may derive pleasure and instruction from comparing their penmanship, aided by the latest triumph of mechanical invention, with that of their predecessors, who had to depend upon what the poet called "Nature's noblest gift.—the gray goose quill."

Laying Cables Dangerous Job

New Line Constructed Between U. S. and Europe Is the Largest and Fastest.

New York.—During a period of almost three-quarters of a century tiny strands of copper, resting in the stillness and darkness on the ocean's bed have been carrying messages between Europe and North America. The electrical impulses passing over these wires have linked the Old and the New World. Time between the two has been abridged to seconds and minutes, as through the Atlantic waters flash the doings and sayings of the people on each side of the ocean.

Few persons who send cablegrams have any adequate conception of the work which must be done and the amount of money spent before such messages can be flashed from one continent to the other. The laying of an ocean cable, its manufacture and repair while in service, may be called herculean feats.

This subject is now creating interest for the reason that the Postal Telegraph-Commercial Cables system the other day took the first step in the laying of a new cable between the United States and Europe. This is said to be the largest and fastest in operation of any deep-sea cable ever manufactured. It is the first to be laid between this country and Europe since 1910, and it will establish the sixth transatlantic circuit owned and operated by the Mackay system.

Largest Cable in the World.

The American end of the cable was connected with the station at Far Rockaway on August 26, and from that point the cableship Faraday will lay the Far Rockaway-Canso section, which terminates at Canso, Nova Scotia. This cable has a length of about 1,000 miles. Meanwhile, the cableship Colonia, the largest of her kind in the world, will begin to lay another section of the new cable, about 1,700 miles in length, from Casno to the Azores islands.

At the Azores connection will be made with cables reaching London by way of Waterville, Ireland, and later in the fall a new section of 1,546 miles will be submerged between the Azores and Havre, thus providing a direct circuit to France and the Continent.

The new cable has the largest copper conductor ever put in a long distance submarine cable, and its message-carrying capacity is said to far exceed that of any similar length. The conductor of the main section weighs 1,100 pounds per nautical mile, against 700 pounds in the largest deep-sea cables used heretofore. The working speed of the new system is expected to be 600 letters a minute simultaneously in each direction, or a full capacity of 1,200 letters.

The laying of this new cable recalls the trials and hardships encountered by Cyrus West Field when he labored to get the first cable across the Atlantic. After the necessary survey of the ocean's bed had been made in 1856 by the United States and the British governments the historic undertaking was begun in August, 1857. The starting point was at Valentia, on the west coast of Ireland. After the cable ship had covered a distance of three miles from shore the cable broke because it was of weak construction. In June, 1858, attempts to lay the cable were resumed. Time and again a start was made, but each attempt proved unsuccessful. The greatest length laid was 200 miles.

150 Words Sent in 30 Hours.

In spite of these disheartening failures Field did not despair, and in July he made another attempt. This time the venture proved successful. The cable reached Nova Scotia, and on August 16, 1858, the first cablegram was sent from America to Europe. This message was a greeting from President Buchanan to Queen Victoria. It contained 150 words and it took 30 hours to send it across. A comparison of this speed with that of today may prove interesting. Now a message of that number of words can be sent to England in one and one-quarter minutes.

The first cable across the Atlantic was in operation until October 20, that year, when it broke down. It was operated by means of large induction coils and batteries with a potential of 500 volts or more.

The next attempt to lay a cable was made in 1865. A contract for a new line had been given to an English company. This cable weighed 300 pounds to the mile instead of 107, the weight of the old. The Great Eastern, a large ocean-going steamship, was chartered for the trip. On July 23, 1865, with Cyrus Field aboard, the ship started westward from Valentia. Everything went well until the vessel was within 600 miles of the Newfoundland coast, when the cable broke. Attempts were made to recover it at the time, but these were unsuccessful. Field and his men had to turn back and report their ill luck.

Lost Cable Retrieved.

Preparations were made for a further attempt on July 13, 1866, the Great Eastern started from Valentia on her second voyage. This proved to be a triumphant one. The ship reached Trinity bay, Nova Scotia, without mishap on July 27, and the two hemispheres were again joined by means of cable communication. On the return trip to Europe the Great Eastern made a search for the cable lost the previous year and luckily enough found it. This was joined to a new section which was laid the remaining distance to Nova Scotia and thus two transatlantic cables went into operation in that year.

To give the reader some idea of the cable rates to Europe in those days it might be stated that in 1866 the minimum rate for a 20-word message was $100. The minimum rate, or deferred service rate, today for a similar message is only $1, and the deferred service message of the present reaches its destination sooner than did the fast messages in 1866.

Although it is almost three-fourths of a century since oceanic telegraph communication was established, most people know little about the making and laying of cables. The heart of the cable is the conductor and this, through which the electrical impulses are transmitted, is composed of the purest quality of copper. Since cables lie at the bottom of the ocean in depths ranging from two to three thousand fathoms, or between two and three miles deep, and as the lifting of a cable from such a depth involves a great strain upon it and all the materials used in its construction, it will be understood that flexibility must be reckoned with.

Delicate Work Involved.

The copper core is manufactured in lengths of about three miles and is coiled temporarily on drums. These lengths of core later are joined together and the jointing is of the greatest importance. It is done by hand and requires skillful workmanship. If any dust or gasses are allowed to remain or to form in the gutta percha while making a joint it may mean the loss of thousands of dollars, because this weakness will not become apparent until the cable is submerged and thus placed under great pressure, when the most minute impurity or gas bubble in the joint would manifest itself and cause faulty electrical continuity. The deep-sea cable jointer must be a man of temperate habits and in good health. It may seem almost inconceivable, but numerous joints made by skillful but intemperate or unhealthy jointers have proved faulty through what was believed to be the injurious exudations from the pores of the fingers. This will give some idea of the extreme delicacy and importance of perfect jointing.

Over the gutta percha insulation a brass tape is wound which protects the insulation against attacks of an aqueous worm, known as the teredo.

In the manufacture of the new cable for the Mackay system more than 4,000,000 pounds of copper were required for its conductor and 2,000,000 pounds of gutta percha for insulation. At the same time upwards of 80,000 miles of steel and iron wires of varying sizes were needed to protect the copper conductor and the gutta percha insulation.

Near landing places the armor wires of the cable are large and heavy. The cost and the laying of the cable will amount to something more than $15,000,000.

Route Must Be Surveyed.

The laying of long submarine cable is not an easy matter. It is a well-known fact that the contour of the ocean's bottom varies similarly to that of dry land. It has its rolling and steep hills, its valleys and plateaus. It therefore is necessary to know the contour of the ocean bed before the cable is laid. This is essential to avoid suspending the cable between two hills, where it would hang in a festoon, or like a clothesline between two poles. Such suspension soon would cause the cable to wear because of its own weight.

The route over which the cable will lie must be more carefully surveyed than the course for a new railroad over prairies, through forests and across mountain passes.

Always Dangerous Task.

The men in charge of cable laying say that under the most favorable conditions it is anxious work. At any time during the paying out, some ten or fourteen days, a storm may arise and raise havoc with the work. One can imagine what a strain is placed on the cable reeling from the stern of the vessel as this is whipped about on mountainous waves. The cable is very likely to break under such conditions and it may be lost in a depth of 2,000 fathoms.

It is hard to predict the time of recovery. It may take three or four days and it may take weeks and months. Should a cable break and be lost, in spite of the best precautions, a mark buoy is lowered at once to guide the ship in grappling operations. Then the dragging is done at right angles to the line in which the cable lies. The grappling iron used to drag the ocean bottom looks like a four-pronged anchor, and if it once catches the cable it will hold it securely until raised to the surface.

Close to the shore where the cables lie in shallow water they suffer from corrosion and the anchors of ships. There are cases on record where cables have been broken by icebergs grinding and crushing them. Some time ago, when the Commercial Cable company's vessel, the Mackay-Bennett, was on a repair trip, she counted as many as 100 icebergs. In order to carry on her work she had to tow an iceberg to sea so as to take it off the line of cables that needed repair. Cables have been broken in the deeper waters of the Atlantic by submarine slides, which have buried the lines for many miles. A whale one time put an Alaskan cable out of commission. The line was broken and the decomposed carcass of the whale found encircled by the cable when it was recovered during repair. There was an instance where one of the cables in southern waters was damaged by a shark's tooth, which was imbedded in the gutta percha insulation.

Man Eats Ten Pies in Sixty Mouthfuls

Lancaster, Pa.—Arrested for beating a man who refused to pay a wager lost when he ate a pie in six bites, Harold Eckman of Lancaster further added to his laurels in police court. Mayor Musser gave him ten pies, telling policemen that they could divide what remained.

The "cops" licked their chops at sight of the pies, but Eckman smiled. He ate the whole ten, crust and all, taking six bites to the pie.

BRAVE GIRL SAVES MAN FROM DEATH IN RIVER

Succeeds in Making Rescue Despite Swimmer's Struggles; Injured by Kick.

Detroit, Mich.—A fifteen-year-old girl saved a man from drowning in the Clinton river, although painfully injured by a kick inflicted by him in his frenzied struggles.

The man, Ray Kelly, thirty-two years old, living near Gratiot avenue and the Seven-Mile road, was a powerful swimmer. He was attempting to cross the mouth of the stream, near Mt. Clemens, when he was seized with cramps.

Although several men were within hearing of the man's cries, Lillian Vervaecke, 1231 Lakepointe avenue, Grosse Pointe Park, a school girl, was the only person to act.

She jumped into the river without hesitation and swam to the man's side. He had gone down twice. His arms were flailing the water desperately, in the attempt to keep his head above the waves.

The girl took a number of blows on her arms as she circled Kelly, seeking to grasp his body. A violent kick caused her to falter. She pluckily continued her attempt, however, and succeeded in getting around to Kelly's back.

She forced him on his back and kept him afloat in that position for several minutes. He struggled desperately all through the rescue. It was only with the greatest difficulty that the girl was able to keep her hold.

Finally, a boat put out and Elmer A. Orth, Detroit contractor, hauled both into safety.

Lillian is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Camile Varvaecke. She is a pupil at the Cadieux junior high school. She is a slight girl for her age, but has had considerable athletic training as a member of the girl scouts. She suffered no ill effects from her rescue, except that she was badly bruised by the kick.

Lillian's mother is an invalid, and she has been her mother's helper in bringing up several younger children.

"It was the only thing to do," was her only comment after the rescue.

Quart of Pebbles Taken From Stomach of Child

Morrisville, Pa.—Fondness for swallowing pebbles cost the life of Charles F. Cash, Jr., five years old. The child had been ill only a few days, his condition became worse and he expired before a physician could be summoned.

On two or three previous occasions the child was taken seriously ill, and for a time the cause of the attacks was a mystery. Finally, when the nature of the trouble was learned, a quart of pebbles were removed from his body by a local physician. Upon another occasion the boy had a more serious attack and was removed to a hospital, where he was operated upon and another large quantity of pebbles removed.

The home of the family is in Manor Park, where there are a number of gravel beds. Why the child persisted in swallowing the stones was a mystery, but it had been his practice ever since he was three years old.

Montana to Jail Cows if They Eat Loco Weed

Helena, Mont.—A cow, or any other animal which becomes addicted to the narcotic habit in Montana, may be arrested and confined in the state sanitarium until pronounced cured by the physician in charge, according to a new state law.

The new law, legislators say, is the result of a clerical error made in the closing days of the session. An amendment, intended to strengthen the anti-narcotic law, was tacked onto the law providing for the condemnation of stock driven insane by the eating of loco weed.

Man, Eighty-One, Prefers Prison.

Kansas City, Kans.—"I'd lots rather be in prison in Kansas than free in California," declared eighty-one-year-old Miles Lauderback, a paroled prisoner. Lauderback deliberately violated his parole so he could leave his home in California and be returned to prison in Kansas, he told penitentiary officials.

Live Steam Traps Sixty Women.

Nyack, N. Y.—Eight women are dead and a number lie in hospitals, seriously burned, as the result of a collision between a motorbus and a heavy road roller. The bus, which contained 60 women, struck the roller and knocked off a steam valve. The passengers were trapped in the scalding vapor.

Well-Known Engineer Comes Out With Facts

"I am always glad to recommend Tanlac to anyone suffering as I did, for it certainly is a wonderful medicine," recently said John B. Stout, High St., Hummelstown, Pa., well-known Philadelphia & Reading engineer. Mr. Stout then related his experience with Tanlac as follows:

"For two years I had been in a badly rundown condition. My nerves were unstrung, I had no appetite, and the little I did eat was hardly worth my going to the table. My rest was so broken I got up mornings tired as when I went to bed.

"Well, sir, I noticed an improvement with my first dose of Tanlac. Six bottles sidetracked my troubles, and I now feel fine, eat hearty, sleep all night and get up mornings brimful of energy. My nerves, too, are steady as steel.

"My wife is taking Tanlac now for stomach trouble, and while just on her first bottle, both of us notice the improvement. We wouldn't think of living without Tanlac."

MR. DALE'S BLUNDER.

Until "The Republican" learned definitely within the last few days that Arthur C. Dale will not withdraw as the Democratic candidate for District Attorney, we tried to believe that due to inexperience he was merely a victim of scheming politicians. It is with sincere regret that we find our view in the matter to have been built upon a false foundation.

Mr. Dale, assuming to speak for himself, has declared that while he has heretofore been a Republican he now openly allies himself as a Democrat, and as such he stands out as an antagonist to the Republican party. As a candidate on the Democratic ticket he could not honorably work for himself, alone. He must work for the whole Democratic ticket, and in so doing he is striving for the defeat of the entire Republican ticket in Centre County.

We cannot but pity any young man, Republican or Democrat, who is so eager to get a political job that he will turn his back on his own party. Occasionally some one has tried it, only to realize his mistake when it was too late. We venture the prediction that Mr. Dale will be no exception to the rule. History has a habit of repeating itself.

Even if Mr. Dale is successful in the present campaign, which he will not be, the price he must pay for a political bauble is out of all proportion to the empty honor he seeks. Had he been strong enough to resist temptation, had he proved himself loyal and true to his party, his political future might have been richly blessed with honors. But he was not content to wait. His eagerness to jump into public office apparently was so great that it blinded him to the fact that the Democratic party bosses would not have considered him for District Attorney in preference to any regular Democrat, had there been one in the field. Once the present campaign is over, and even if he should be elected, Mr. Dale will discover to his sorrow that the Democratic party has nothing in store for him. And he will also learn, equally to his sorrow, for then it will be too late, that the Republican party rewards with honors its sons who stand faithful and true when the party is engaged in battle.

If we are correctly informed, Mr. Dale assured John Love, his Republican opponent, that he would not become a candidate if Mr. Love entered the field. If that is true, and we desire to be corrected if it isn't true, then Mr. Dale must have a troubled conscience every time he seeks a vote against Mr. Love. We prefer to believe that Mr. Dale did not so pledge himself. We would rather not believe that he would prove to be so lacking in honor and principle in a personal matter. When a man's word isn't good in one thing, it isn't good in anything.

Mr. Love is the Republican nominee for District Attorney. His party nominated him over Mr. Dale by a large majority. A son of the late Ex-Judge Love, he is by nature and training splendidly equipped to serve the people in a legal capacity. There is no hypocrisy about him. Like most young men he has made some mistakes, which he frankly admits, whereas some others we might mention have made even more glaring errors, and bask in the comfort of imagining that their sins have not found them out. A good many things have a habit of coming to light in a political campaign, and the present campaign probably will not prove to be the exception in this respect.

Killed in Runaway.

Mrs. Annie Datton, of Clinton County, was almost instantly killed but her husband, William Dutton, escaped injury, when a team of horses ran away and upset a carriage in which they were driving from their home in Pine township toward Woolrich. The tongue of the carriage dropped from the neck-yoke and scared the horses. As they raced away the carriage ran up an embankment and turned over. Mr. and Mrs. Dutton were both thrown from the carriage, and Mrs. Dutton was painfully injured and suffered from shock, having been ailing from heart trouble, and she expired in a lumber camp, to which she had been carried, before a physician arrived. She was 59 years old and is survived by her husband and nine children.

AFTER DOG OWNERS

State Officer Files Information Against Nine Persons.

Information against nine persons alleged to have violated the state dog law were made by P. S. Boyer, a deputy state officer from Harrisburg, this week, and most of the persons appeared before Kline Woodring, justice of the peace, as ordered, last evening.

A number of those against whom complaints for violating the dog law had been made, agreeably paid their fines and costs, intimating that the failure to have their pets licensed in most instances was due to neglect rather than than desire to violate the law. In two instances, at least, there was some doubt as to the procedure to follow.

Harry B. Watson, of Milesburg, has steadfastly refused to appear before a justice, claiming, it is alleged, his dog was born on March 1 and therefore not 6 months old when information was made against him the early part of this month. This case is still in the hands of the justice and its settlement will depend entirely on wheter Watson can prove that his dog is under 6 months old. The law clearly states dogs under 6 months need not be licensed, but it puts the burden of proof of the animal's age on the owner.

C. M. Rider, against whom information was filed by Mr. Boyer, an agent of the State Department of Agriculture, has an other interesting case. Mr. Rider resides on the J. C. Witmer farm in Benner Twp. He was in town for a load of fertilizer and the dog had followed the wagon without his knowledge. Boyer was with Thomas Mosier, game protector, and noticed the dog had no license. He immediately got busy and soon gave Rider a written notice to appear before Justice Woodring.

Rider entered the office of the 'Squire in an indignant mood and demanded an explanation, but Mr. Woodring had no notice of what had occurred and was somewhat puzzled until Rider showed him the paper. Rider then explained how the pup had come to his home some months ago and had become attached to the children, so he was now its owner, but he had proof the dog was not yet 6 months old.

Pastor Returns to Churches.

Rev. Louis V. Barber, who has been on leave to recuperate his shattered health, visiting a part of that time in Centre County among former parishioners, returned to the churches at Beech Creek and Mill Hall, in his charge, this week and will hold services in the Presbyterian churches there on Sunday. Phil. P. Baird, Jr., who filled the pulpit in both churches during Rev. Barber's absence, departed this week for Princeton, N. J., where he will resume his studies in the Theological seminary. His wife and two sons accompanied him.

Masquerader at Beech Creek.

A strange man, disguised as a woman, visited Beech Creek last week and had a taxi driver take "her" to various farms, which "she" inquired about as if intending to buy a farm. Just what "her" mission was is a mystery.

COAL TAKES JUMP

Anthracite coal will cost consumers in and nearby Bellefonte at least $17 and more likely $17.50 per ton for the coming winter. Local dealers said yesterday that this price may be looked for, and in fact cannot be avoided.

Jumping anthracite coal $1 per ton, and possibly more, is the first result of the settlement of the recent strike. Governor Pinchot handled the terms of settlement. One of these was a 10% increase in wages for the miners. He expressed the belief that this increase in wages would not necessarily cause increased prices for coal to consumers. As things turn out, the retail cost is advanced $1 per ton.

Local yards have had no chestnut or stove coal for some weeks. Now that the "strike" has been settled and the price advanced local dealers say they will have plenty of hard coal on hand beginning with next week.

Express Truck Wrecked.

An Overland auto truck used by A. L. Peters, of State College, in his express business between Bellefonte and State College, was wrecked on Saturday when it was driven into the side of a concrete culvert abutment near AxeMann. Two cases of milk were smashed, but the other express was not much damaged and was delivered as designated. Mr. Peters had severe cuts about his jaw and mouth, but was not seriously injured.

The late crop of potatoes in Centre County is better than expected. Farmers have been raising them for several weeks. In Penn's valley they are being brought up in carload lots for shipment to city markets at $1 per bushel while in the districts on this side of the mountain they are being bought at $1.10 per bushel. At retail the price varies from $1.40 per bushel and up.

Howard Ritter, in driving his car around the corner of a street at the Lutheran church in Centre Hall, collided with a tree. The car was considerably damaged and Mr. Ritter had an eye knocked out, but it was quickly picked up from among the shattered glass and replaced, as he has done on former occasions. Otherwise, he was not hurt, and his companion, Newton Crawford, also escaped injury.

The John Messmer dwelling at Penn Hall was completely destroyed by fire on Monday of last week. Mrs. Messmer was alone and, on account of her advanced age and inability to get about well, she was unable to save any of the contents, which were also burned. Mr. Messmer was at work at a sawmill. Outbuildings were all burned except a stable. As the Messmers carried no insurance they keenly felt their loss.

The Snyder hunting club has purchased one half interest in the 1,300 acres tract of land in High valley from the Henry Stover estate. The tract is mountain land and noted for the game which abounds upon it, especially deer. David Stover, of Centre Hall, owns the other half interest.

Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Musser, their daughter, Mrs. Lida McCloskey, and her two children, Clair and Pearl, were all injured, though none seriously, when an Overland sedan car in which they were riding along the Susquehanna trail near Milton was wrecked. Mrs. McCloskey was driving and bright lights on an approaching car blinded her so that she failed to notice a Chevrolet touring car parked at the side of the highway and drove into it. The Chevrolet was started toward the river, down an embankment, but the driver was in it and stopped it. It was slightly damaged. The occupants of the Overland called a Millheim taxi man and were brought to their home in Millheim. The wrecked Overland was towed to the Millheim garage for repairs and the Chevrolet to a Lewisburg garage.

Mrs. Mary Fox Dead.

In the passing away of Mrs. Mary Fox, at her home on East Bishop St. on Saturday afternoon, the community loses one of its oldest and best known residents, a woman highly esteemed because of her characteristic desire to bring happiness into the lives of others. Her husband, the late Joseph Fox, died about 22 years ago. They built the Fox home about 50 years ago and it was one of the first dwellings to be erected on East Bishop St. Mrs. Fox kept the home fires burning for 2 of her daughters and her 2 sons, enjoying fairly good health until recently. The death of her daughter, the late Mrs. C. M. Parrish, affected her very much and she became seriously ill about a week before her death, due to sheer exhaustion. The deceased was 73 years old and had resided in this section all her life, being brought here in infancy by her parents, Lawrence and Mary Cooney, of Ireland, long since deceased. For three months they were located at Burlington, Vt., and then came to Bellefonte. She was an active member of St. John's Catholic church and was always interested in matters pertaining to the good of the community. Surviving are 6 children: Mrs. Howard Gearhart, of Millville, N. Some months ago she closed her house on Main street to make her home with her son-in-law, G. C. Corl, on the old home farm. She was a daughter of Gilbert and Elizabeth Ardery, and was born on November 21, 1853, therefore was 70 years, 10 months and 29 days old. She is survived by one daughter, Bessie, wife of G. C. MRS. COFFMAN ILL SEVEN YEARS

Saved from an Operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sidell, Ill.—"I was a nervous wreck. I was suffering from a pain in my left side, which was almost unbearable, and I could not even let the bed clothing rest on my body at night. I had been sick for seven years, but not so bad until the last eighteen months, and had become so run-down that I cared for nobody, and would rather have died than live. I couldn't do my work without help, and the doctors told me that an operation was all there was left. I would not consent to that, so my husband brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged me to take it. I have taken fourteen bottles of it and I feel ten years younger. Life is full of hope. I do all my housework and had a large garden this year. I never will be without the Vegetable Compound in the house, and when my two little girls reach womanhood I intend to teach them to take it. I am never too busy to tell some suffering sister of my help, and you can use my name and letter to spread the good news of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines."—Mrs. IDA M. COFFMAN, R.B. 2, Sidell, Ill.

THEY CALLED HIM AN "OLD PILL"

HAD TRAMP CHAIR

Maine Used Odd Contrivance to Rout Hoboes.

Large Iron Cage for Wanderers Succeeded Newspaper's Exposure of Unique Graft System.

Out in a dump pile in the outskirts of Rockport, Me., is the wreck of one of the "tramp" chairs which attained fame in Maine something like twenty-five years ago. This chair was expected to put an end to the tramp evil—for the tramp had become an evil in the state at that time—but like so many other things of which wonderful reforms are expected, it failed. However, before its failure became definitely established, many Maine towns purchased one of the chairs, and today there are in many junk piles of the state specimens of the chair in varied states of preservation.

This chair was nothing more or less than a cage of strap iron built in crude imitation of a chair. The front would swing open so that the hobo sentenced to do his bit in the contraption could step in and sit down. It was then swung back and locked. There was very little opportunity for moving, so that the thing was actually a machine to torture rather than punishment. A shelf on the front served as a table from which the tramp inside could eat. The chair was mounted on wheels so that it could be moved about.

What brought this chair into existence, undoubtedly, was the exposure by the Boston Globe of a system of graft in vogue in York county and some other sections of the state by making use of the Maine tramp laws.

The plan was a combination between certain trial justices, deputy sheriffs and constables to keep the justices busy trying tramp cases and the jail full of the wayfarers. These trial justices got a fee from the state for every case they heard, the officer received a fee for the arrest and transportation of the prisoners and the sheriff got so much a day for each prisoner he had in the jail. In order to make the scheme work they had to have a sufficient number of tramps, and this was what in the end led to its expose. These men didn't try to hog all the money. In order to be sure of a sufficient supply of raw material in the person of tramps they paid the tramps a percentage of the amount of fees received. This kept the raw material interested.

Short sentences were given in all cases. Ten days in the jail was a long time. Usually it was not more than six. The sheriff did not work them hard, fed them well, and they were always sure of a good bed and a warm place to stay in cold weather. When a tramp was released from the jail he was given directions what town to visit next. In this way the frequency of men being sentenced to jail took on a semblance of reasonableness so that no one got wise to the arrangement until the story was told in the Globe.

Virgil Eaton, a native of Maine, was at that time one of the star reporters on the Globe. He heard of the system and came down to Maine to investigate. He disguised himself as a tramp, got arrested and sentenced to jail; also he became one of the members of the graft ring as a part of the raw material supply, so that when his story was printed it was correct to the minutest details of the methods of working the scheme.

Naturally, this put an end to the tramp industry, but it didn't relieve Maine of the tramp problem.

The state was fairly swarming with tramps. When the tramp industry "blew" their soft snap was ended in all sections of the state. Officers and justices dare not be lenient on tramps and in the effort to drive them from the state this tramp chair was devised.

In the "Good Old Days."

It was in the early days of sleeping cars, when they measured the sheets by square inches and weighed the blankets on letter-scales.

It was also a suffering passenger who, tossing and jolting through the dark and chilly night, wondered whether, by error, he was sleeping between towels and would possibly find the sheets hanging over the towel-horse next morning.

"Porter," he cried, as the train gave a particularly vicious jolt, and dragged his last sheet of bed-clothing aside, "bring me a corkscrew!"

The porter came hurrying.

"Sorry sir," he said respectfully, "but we don't allow drinking in the berths."

"I don't want to drink!" retorted the suffering passenger. "I merely want to extract a pillow that has worked its way into my ear."

After Thinking Twice.

Father was standing before the fire lecturing his son and heir on the necessity for thinking twice before speaking once.

"Father!" exclaimed the boy suddenly.

The parent held up a warning finger. "Think again before you speak and then I will answer you."

The boy pondered for a minute or so and then said: "Father, I have thought twice and now I am quite convinced that your coat tails are on fire."—Boston Herald.

Inland Seaport City in China

Hankow, 600 Miles Up the Yangtze River, Has Enormous Ocean-Going Business.

Washington.—Kidnaping of two American priests at Tsaoshih, China, turns attention of the Christian world to a region of a pioneer missionary activity in the Orient, to the triple-city "Chicago of China," and to a province where cotton, wheat and tobacco far outrank the rice crop.

"For Tsaoshih is in Hupeh province, northwest of Hankow, and near enough to be called a suburb in our terminology," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Across one river from Hankow—the narrow, turbulent Han Kiang—is the sister city, Hanyang; and across the mile-wide Yangtze from Hanyang is Wachang. Wachang was famous and venerable when Hankow was a fishing hamlet. Today Hankow lords it over both her sister cities because she sends her cargoes to the seven seas. Her trade outshines her neighbors' temples.

Over a Million Population.

"Nowhere else in the world does a community of this size—the municipal 'Tripolis' has a million and a quarter people—do an ocean-going business of such magnitude so far from the sea. For Hankow is nearly 600 miles up the Yangtze.

"The Chinese call the three cities 'The Collecting Place for Nine Provinces,' with a show of accuracy, and a rather less moderate nickname is 'Hub of the Universe.'

"A brief stroll through Hankow's streets with an interpreter would impress an American advertising man that, as slogan writers, the Chinese might offer helpful hints.

Chinese Veteran Advertisers.

"Gaudy and distinctive signs on Hankow shops are as characteristic as the electric sky-signs of Broadway. After each firm name is a motto—a legend of good omen—and when a store changes hands the sign is an item of high value, both for its intrinsic worth and for what we would term a trademark. Moreover, there is a regulation of custom, if not of law, regarding these signs, for each trade has boards of distinctive shape, special color, and perhaps a peculiar design of lacquer.

"A visiting business man to a native Hankow business street would find more differences than likenesses. More conspicuous than any sight he sees is the noise he hears. Bargaining is done in front of shops, and is carried on in the raucous, high-pitched voices of angry contenders. Every Hankow sale begets an argument; and the louder and more persistent wins his price.

Terrible Din in Streets.

"Nor is that all. Coolies with rickshas, and coolies with big bundles on bamboo poles, yell and bump into each other despite their yells. Should a mandarin be borne along, the deafening din becomes truly terrible. His coolies seem chosen for their shouting power.

"One would rather wear earmuffs than forego the shops. Their variety is amazing. They offer bean cakes and coffins, rolls of silk and melon seeds, dates and drugs and idols. A child would find a paradise in those which display figures of horses, elephants, carts and tigers until his parent pulled him away, knowing these were the gruesome tokens sold to bury with the dead.

"Approach the river front, along the Bund, and the scene changes. Here are buildings in Russian, English, German and French architecture. But Hankow's most amazing spectacle is the panorama of junks of many types, ungainly but performing like trained seals in the hands of their expert rivermen and thousands of these craft line up for miles on both sides of both rivers. It is estimated that 25,000 of them ply in and out of the three cities.

Use Primitive Implements.

"Hupeh, like its metropolis, is a densely populated province. Its area is equal to that of New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island combined. Its population is one-third greater than these, our most populous states.

"Its soil is fertile, especially in the Han valley, yet even with that advantage the wonder is that its hordes eke out a living with such primitive implements. The native uses a single-handed, iron-pointed plow, and not infrequently a man and a donkey are yoked together to pull it. Wooden mallets for breaking up clods, stones for threshing, and bamboo flails still are employed. Cotton, wheat, tobacco and beans are the principal crops.

"Up this valley, flat and prairielike, runs the Hankow-Peking express with superabundant 'service'—one porter for baggage, another to dust one's shoes and bring wet towels frequently as pleasant relief for perspiring passengers, a third to serve tea, a fourth to make beds, and others the traveler is not aware of until they line up at his journey's end for tips. That expense is more than atoned for in the meals of many courses, each abundant and delicious, which cost less than a dollar."

Refuses to Live With Her Successor

Indianapolis.—His suggestion to his wife that "the other woman," mother of his unborn child, should be admitted to their household so "all three of us can live together," was met by the legal mate of Walter R. Owens by a suit for divorce.

Mrs. Owens became suspicious when her husband showed her a picture of Miss Hazel Hower. The wife, it is alleged, followed her husband and surprised him here with the girl.

Coolidge Family Is Fond of Plain Food

"Mac," Their Boston Waiter, Talks About Their Simple Gastronomic Tastes.

Boston, Mass.—Much has been written lately about the simple tastes and unassuming ways of Calvin Coolidge, now President of the United States, and of Mrs. Coolidge, and those who are well acquainted with them say this simplicity permeates their life. When Coolidge was governor of Massachusetts he and Mrs. Coolidge made their home at the Adams house, and their regular waiter there, "Mac," who is known to many hundreds of Bostonians, told a writer for the Boston Sunday Advertiser a lot about their gastronomical tastes. Said he:

"Their breakfast order was always the same—'Two Special No. 1's, grapefruit for Mrs. Coolidge and orange for me.'

"Special No. 1 never varied. It consisted of two small pots of coffee, graham muffins and fruit.

"Mr. Coolidge would give the order and call for a clean glass and a whole orange. He would squeeze the orange himself into the glass, and drink the juice.

Silent at Meals.

"Mrs. Coolidge always had half a grapefruit.

"They were generally alone at breakfast, as their boys were at school and only visited them in vacation time. Once, though, when the boys were there, they wanted ham and eggs for breakfast. Mrs. Coolidge ordered it for them, but when the governor found it out, he frowned on giving the kids meat for breakfast.

"They were seldom at my table for lunch, as they were both often gone all day. But they would be back for dinner, unless they were dining out.

"Then Mrs. Coolidge used to order a chop—the way you do," interpolated "Mac," who has an uncanny memory for the likes and dislikes of every one of his patrons.

"Sometimes she would have a steak. But Mr. Coolidge always made his dinner on cereal—usually grape nuts and tea or milk.

"He was just as quiet at their family meals as he is in public life. Hardly ever said a word. Breakfast over, he would go away in silence.

"They seldom had guests, except Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns, who were with them frequently.

"Sometimes there would be one or two others with them at dinner. On those occasions Mrs. Coolidge would try every way in the world to get him to join in the conversation. Nothing doing. He would look and listen, but hardly ever opened his mouth—except for his grape nuts. Once in a while he would shoot a little smile—like this—" and for a fleeting instant "Mac" was the living image of the President.

President Coolidge.

"He is a hard man to get at, if you know what I mean. But when you once do get at him, you find he has one of the best hearts in the world.

All Liked Mrs. Coolidge.

"But for kindness and a charming manner combined, Mrs. Coolidge was the one. Every waiter in the dining room liked to serve her. She was always considerate, always appreciative for anything done for her. If Mrs. Coolidge once knew you, she knew you everywhere, no matter where she happened to meet you. In the hotel corridor, or in the street, she would always bow. She's a fine woman.

"I used to look at those boys, and their good manners, and wonder how she did it. But then, bringing up six. (Six little McKeoughs, remember.)

"I said to one of my boys the other day, 'Look at young Calvin Coolidge. His father's President of the United States, and he's looking for farm work at $3.50 a day. I suppose if I was president you'd be wanting to take it easy in the White House.'"

Girl Clerks in England Ask for Raise in Wages

London.—Girl clerks in American offices who bemoan the slimness of $15 and $20 a week salaries are considered lucky by their poorer-paid counterparts in England.

There are 3,000 women clerks in government offices who receive less than the equivalent of $10 a week. They don't like it, but they don't know what to do about it, for there are still more than 1,000,000 unemployed in England who stand ready to pounce on positions the minute they are vacated. Most of these government clerks have passed thirty, and among them there are widows with children to support.

The clerks have asked the government to increase their pay by $2 or $2.50 a week. Some of the newspapers are supporting their requests. It is said the girls who cannot make both ends meet on their salaries are making up the difference after hours, by sewing, doing laundry work and teaching dancing.

SURGEONS FIND GLOVE IN PATIENT

TO SUE FOR DAMAGES

Salem, Ore.—Local physicians, operating upon Jerry Wyant, linotype expert, here, removed a rubber glove that had been incased in the patient's bladder for 22 months.

According to Dr. W. H. Byrd, one of the attending physicians, Wyant underwent a previous operation for the removal of gall stones at San Francisco 22 months ago. Three months later he suffered from intense pains and it was necessary to perform another operation. On this occasion the San Francisco physicians removed from his bladder a sponge. Whether the glove was left in the bladder at the time of performing the first or second operation has not been determined, according to the physicians who performed the latest surgical feat.

Soon after his second operation Mr. Wyant came to Salem to visit with his brother-in-law, J. L. Vibbert, 1120 South Commercial street. His health improved and he later returned to San Francisco.

Early this summer Wyant again suffered severe pains, and Mrs. Wyant insisted that her husband come to Salem and undergo another operation. He consented, and has been here for several weeks.

A few days ago the doctors conducted an X-ray examination, with the result that the plate showed a few small gall stones and a black substance. An immediate operation was advised by the physicians. The black substance proved to be the glove.

Three surgeons, a surgical nurse and another nurse were in attendance at the operation. The glove, upon being taken from Wyant's body, was placed in a jar and sealed. It was said that the glove may be used as an exhibit in a damage suit against the three California physicians who performed the previous operations upon the patient. Physicians said Wyant will recover.

Mr. Wyant is one of the best known linotype experts on the Pacific coast, and has worked in Portland, Seattle and San Francisco.

Mrs. Wyant said that her husband probably will return to San Francisco as soon as he is able to leave the hospital.

Bank Gave Way as Family Drove Over Narrow Road.

Mr. and Mrs. John Confer and their daughter Alta, 3 years old, on Friday morning were injured when the Ford touring car in which they were traveling from their home at Cook's Run to Renovo, plunged into the Susquehanna river. The car turned over several times as it went down the embankment, landing in the river. Mr. and Mrs. Confer and their daughter were thrown into the water and the girl was unconscious when taken from the stream, it being about 20 minutes before she could be resuscitated. Mr. Confer was cut about the left arm and his face, Mrs. Confer had a severe gash on her chin which required several stitches to close, and the child sustained a fracture of her left arm and two fingers on her left hand.

Robbed Bungalow at Nittany.

Miss Helen Schaeffer, of Bellefonte, upon going to her bungalow at Nittany last Sunday, discovered that thieves had entered it some time during the last two weeks and carried off a number of useful articles. The things stolen would be desirable for use in a home or hunting camp. They included a steel cot, teapot, playing cards, etc. The cot was so heavy that it could only have been taken away on a truck or wagon. Two locks on the door of the bungalow, one a Yale lock, were found to have been "picked," and locked again when the thieves were ready to leave. The bungalow is located nearby and in full view of the state highway, and just a short distance from the Nittany Tea Room, where there are a number of dogs, but despite this fact the thieves were not detected and apparently took their time in ransacking the place. Groceries, candy, etc., were not disturbed. The thieves, if caught, are due for a term in the penitentiary. Judge Quigley is determined to deal severely with persons who break into and rob bungalows and camps. A year or so ago a cabin on Fishing Creek was robbed and the guilty party was arrested and promptly sentenced to the pettentiary by Judge Baird, at Lock Haven.

Car Hit Lamp Post.

One of the women had a slight cut on the lip from broken glass, but the occupants were otherwise uninjured. They were motoring to Milesburg to attend the Baptist conference.

Car Fired While Getting Gas

A very exciting time occurred at the Fox garage in Lock Haven on last Thursday evening when a Ford car, being filled with gasoline, suddenly burst into flames. A hurry call was sent to the Citizens Hose Company and they extinguished the flames with the contents of a hand chemical tank.

New Baptist Minister.

Interesting Figures.

The assessed valuation of Bellefonte for tax purposes is $1,930,545. That sum, not quite $2,000,000, represents the value of the land and buildings in Bellefonte—or it is supposed to. The three leaders in the automobile sales—the Ford, Chevrolet, Overland and Willys-Knight cars—for this year will run over $3,000,000. Get that. The three most popular makes of automobiles for new models only will be over $3,000,000 for this one year. The land and building in Bellefonte represent well over a century of work and accumulation, but the sale of automobiles, exceeding by $1,000,000 that sum is for 1 year only. Then, there are a number of other cars that have been sold in this vicinity the past year. It was the best year in history for automobile selling. Advertising campaigns of vast scope had much to do with it. But the figures induce thought. Where is all the money coming from to pay for the cars? Why should folks put so much more money in cars than in homes and business places? The answers are many and varied, just as interesting, but the whole situation is not viewed with alarm by the people, the dealers or the bankers. The general impression is that its a good business and the figures indicate that it is. It also indicates prosperity, for it takes money to operate the cars regardless of the make, and the suggestion is Pennsylvania is now chasing New York state for first place as the ideal land in which to live. From Jan. 1 to Aug. 31, the Keystone state had issued 1,003,944 licenses and it is estimated 60,000 more will be issued before the close of the year.

Fatally Injured in Fall.

Jasper Steele died on Wednesday afternoon of last week from injuries received when he fell while threshing on the Geo. Fink farm, at Martha, where he resided. Mr. Steele was on an overhead cross-loft and pitching sheaves, when he made a misstep and fell between the loft timbers to the barn floor, the accident occurring on Wednesday morning. Funeral services were held in Martha Baptist church on Saturday afternoon.

This tribute of confidence in me will always be appreciated. It is now my aim to be elected. My case is entirely in the hands of the people of Bellefonte Borough. ALEXANDER MORRISON

THANKS TO ALL.

It wouldn't be like Tom Fleming to receive such a flattering vote for Overseer of the Poor as was given me at the primary election and then forget to extend my most cordial, heart-felt thanks. I want to thank everybody who voted for me. If I am elected, as I hope to be, I am going to render a good account of myself and show my appreciation to the people of Bellefonte Borough. I want every vote that I can possibly get on election day. A few too many would be very pleasing, but a few less than enough would be mighty disappointing. I am banking on my friends to see me through.

Sincerely,
TOM FLEMING
